

BRITAIN MUST INCREASE COAL PRODUCTION FOR ITS FACTORIES

(Correspondence Associated Press.) LONDON, Jan. 24.—More coal must be produced by the United Kingdom at Great Britain's manufacturing plants to successfully compete in the world's markets with those of other nations, declare well informed persons. They point to an aspect of coal in the United Kingdom, New Zealand and Great Britain to which is being opened and developed in South Wales, the chief source of supply for many years, but the cost of operation increases as the deposits near the surface are exhausted.

New fields have been developed elsewhere, notably in Yorkshire. Nottingham seems to have an inexhaustible supply of coal but developments there have been hampered by the absence of many miners drafted for the army.

Experts have discovered that the amount of coal annually produced by each person employed in the mines has declined from 312 tons in 1914 to 244 tons in 1917. This is contrasted with reports from the United States showing that production of coal there annually has increased from 100 tons per person employed in 1890 to 600 tons in 1917.

This proportionate decrease of British coal production is attributed to two causes—failure to adopt new and improved machinery and systems of operation and demands of miners for more pay and less work.

Continuing a period which the general public has been led to believe Great Britain's most important part of industrial expansion, British industry is demanding cheap coal. Nevertheless, miners in some sections demand a six-hour working day, two days a week, while in other sections the men want to be paid for 20 minutes for refreshments meaning less.

One writer points out that while the cost of producing coal has doubled in Great Britain since 1886, the cost of production in the United States was less in 1912 than in 1886. England he declares, must have cheap coal to carry on her highly developed manufacturing industries in competition with other countries who have that advantage.
